from the middle I am trying to remove an object from the middle of an NSMutableArray. The way i am currently trying to do it is NSMutableArray *payArray = [NSMutableArray arrayWithObjects: 0x123, 0x456, 0x789, nil]; [payArray removeObjectAtIndex:2]; NSLog(@"%@@", payArray); and this outputs the result I am expecting ( 0x123, 0x456, 0x789, nil ) however i get this ( 0x123, 0x456, 0x789, 0 )

What am i doing wrong? The array is generated by adding items to it from another array (in this case a UICollectionViewCells). A: You don't specify the context.

NSArray *payArray = @[ @"0x123", @"0x456", @"0x789" ]; [payArray removeObjectAtIndex:2]; // removes object at index 2. NSArray *payArray = @ 0cc13bf012

(2013) Ever since the Church hierarchy tried to introduce English as the official language of the Roman Curia, they have been wondering why the Francophonie was still thriving. The best reply they got to that is the movie about Pope Leo XIII, on The Line of the Faith or La Linea della Fede

(Frenzy in English), which was released in the past. It is the modern version of the old documentary on the origins of the Vatican I. It is a unique work, among other, because it tells the story of how only the worst of the eventual promoters of the French language inside the Roman Curia managed to gain complete control over the appointment of bishops. And it tells about how they still struggle to gain control over the selection of new cardinals, too. The movie, made by the Swiss moviemaker Fabrice Flahiff, opens with some of these men occupying a meeting of the Congregation of Bishops, and it follows the war between these men about the new president of the pontifical secretariat for Worship and the next cardinal, Bishops of England and Wales, in a Rome. Quick, detailed, and with some humour thrown in, this movie is worth watching, especially those archbishops, cardinals, or archbishop of any other country who are old enough to remember this kind of thing happening in their own countries. And the movie gives an insight in how parts of the Curia is being run from a hick town on a lake called Lugano. Also known as the Linkebrücke, the Biennale Bridge is the work of American architect Peter Csongor Szondi. In collaboration with the Hungarian architect Imre Makovecz, Szondi proposed a bridge that would connect the West and East side of the River Danube.
